Employees working from home

Health and safety obligations towards home workers

As an employer you have the same responsibilities for ensuring the health and safety of home workers as you would for staff based at your premises. Your duties are likely to include:

- carrying out a health and safety risk assessment
- purchasing compulsory employers' liability insurance
- ensuring equipment is fit for its purpose
- testing, certifying and maintaining electrical equipment provided by the business
- ensuring computers can be used comfortably and without disturbing glare, referring to the HSE guide on how to ensure your employees are operating computers safely
- making sure lighting levels are appropriate
- avoiding trailing cables to reduce the risks of trips and falls
- ensuring staff are suitably trained to work safely
- keeping records of, and if necessary reporting, any serious accidents, illnesses or injuries experienced by home workers

Employees who use computers regularly - including home workers - are entitled to an eye test paid for by their employer.

Home workers must take reasonable care of their own health and safety, as well as that of other people such as family members, neighbours and visitors. They must also ensure they use work equipment correctly.
